

Equal Opportunities Workshop: Leading Teams as a Female Scientist

Why does it matter?

As a female scientist, it is of utmost importance to identify one's style of leadership and to successfully put it into action.

Content and impact

- My understanding of leadership - how do I lead myself?
- Identifying my professional values and their impact on my daily work as a team leader
- Roles and tasks as a leader
- Leadership at three levels: technical, relational and personal competencies
- The phases of team development and my respective role as a leader
- Communicating horizontally in a competitive environment
